22 - 24. soruları, aşağıdaki parçaya göre cevaplayınız.

Awareness has increased in recent years, but many children are still not diagnosed with autism until they are four. Detecting autism early is important because it can help the child overcome most negative effects. Getting therapy early can change the course of autism because the child's brain development is most open to learning during this time. There is no medical test to diagnose autism. Instead, it is done by observing a child's behaviour. Researchers have been studying the earliest signs of autism so that doctors can know more about the disease. By watching the home videotapes of young children with autism, some early symptoms have become clear. And also, the younger siblings of children with autism are at increased risk (6 to 9%) of developing autism.

22. As it is mentioned in the passage in order to diagnose autism ---.

- A) doctors or experts have to watch the child's behaviours

- B) have a low risk of suffering from autism
- C) should be treated after they are four
- D) shouldn't grow up in the same house
- E) have more risk of having autism than other children

24. We learn from the passage that ---.

- A) autism is exaggerated by the doctors
- B) many autism cases are noticed later than they should be
- C) autism can be diagnosed in children under four more easily
- D) if autism is noticed earlier it can be treated completely
- E) autistic children's brains are larger
